OPERATION SINDOR

Operation sindoor- A mission by India to end terrorism after the Pahalgam attack by Pakistani terrorists. This mission was led by Colonel Sofiya Qureshi and wing Commander Vyomika Singh, on 7th May 2025 under the supervision of India's Prime Minister Shree Narendra Modi and India's defence minister.

Pakistani terrorist killed innocent male citizens in Kashmir based on their religion in front of their families. Operation Sindoor was put in force by India to kill terrorism. After two nights of attacks, Pakistan requested America to ask India for cease fire. USA President Mr. Donald Trump, negotiated with India and India agreed for cease fire with a few conditions (any further terrorist attack will be considered as a was invitation from Pakistan; was one of them) but just two hours later, Pakistan with the help of China, launched drones, breaking the cease fire. Responding to that, India attacked Pakistan by launching missiles.

During this operation, Pakistan even threatened India to use nuclear missiles but the UN stopped Pakistan from doing so. Later on, all this dispute was cleared by the UN. Pakistan suffered great loss of property and life, so it agreed to India's conditions of cease fire.

But the Indians still demand justice.

"IT IS NOT OVER YET." -Narendra Modi.

Not knowing the meaning of fear, taking the courage to burn their souls — a 60-year struggle, just to achieve our statehood. The result of that statehood was proudly pronounced on June 2nd, 2014. More than just a date — it is a symbol of identity.

The rights that belonged to us were brutally denied and pushed aside. The heritage of Telangana was completely ignored. Most of the people in this region were illiterate, but they were united. Writers, poets, and revolutionaries ignited a powerful movement among the people of Telangana and made them realise the need for an independent state.

Here's where a new voice emerged — KCR, Kalvakuntla Chandrashekar Rao — a voice that echoed in the hearts of the people. The burning flame only grew stronger. No number of pages would be enough to record the sacrifices of the true warriors — those who gave their lives dreaming of a future called Telangana.

There were dharnas, riots, fights — what not? No political party stood with Telangana during its early struggle.

The continuous struggle moved the Indian National Congress, which finally made the movement meaningful by granting statehood in 2014. The new state of Telangana marked a turning point in India's journey towards development. The farmers, the students whose education had been stopped for 2–3 years, the youth, the poets — each and every one of them witnessed their dream come true.

The development in agriculture, the IT sector, and schemes like Rythu Bandhu were all made possible under the leadership of our first Chief Minister, KCR.

It was the true aspiration and unity of the people of Telangana that made this possible — the very state we are living in today. We salute the people who fought and laid down their lives bravely in the struggle. It is now our responsibility to give meaning to their sacrifices by taking Telangana to greater heights.

Child labour refers to work that is harmful to children's health, development or education. Often driven by poverty, lack of schools or family pressures, children as young as five may be forced to work long hours in factories, fields, mines or homes. This deprives them of schooling, play and proper growth, trapping families in a cycle of hardship. Child labour can cause physical injuries, chronic illness and emotional stress. Ending it requires fair wages for adults, free education, safe communities and strong laws to protect children. When families earn enough and schools are welcoming, children can enjoy childhood and build a brighter future.

I, I am just a normal son like several others, but my father is not the same as all fathers. He may not be able to spend time with me, he may sometimes not show his feelings, but he never leaves me when I'm confused. He is the one who paves a perfect path without any bumps on it — just for me.

This day is very special — a moment to express the love between a father and a son, leaving all the worries aside and creating a new and genuine smile on each other's faces.

A day — just 24 simple hours — can't define my care for my father. So, I decide to love him every day, just like I did yesterday, giving my best. But this day — today — it belongs to them, and I believe that every father deserves to be celebrated, at least on this day.

The struggles a father has faced — and continues to face — can never truly be known to a child. A father never lets his son go through the hardships he once faced. He gives everything even before we ask — can't we give him the victory he truly deserves? The bond between a father and a son can never be judged or defined by words, as their eyes speak louder than any words ever could.

Father's Day is not just about giving a gift to our father and wishing him. It's a chance given to us — to spend time with him. And that time, that presence, is the most valuable gift anyone can give to their father.

So, let this Father's Day be celebrated truly — with your father. Give him all your time and care, and pour out every emotion from your heart. Let's take their blessings with us, with love and gratitude.

To my father — Happy Father's Day, Dad. -M.Abhinav, JrShikhar

In gazes deep, where shadows play, Beauty whispers secrets, of life's own way.

Laughters shared and moments lived, Unfold the memories, in the beauty revived.

To see the truth, one must look within, And find the magic, that lies hidden kin.

For life's beauty shines, in every test, When lived with purpose, and a heart that's blessed.

In every breath, a chance to find, The beauty that's within, and let it shine. With eyes that see, beyond the surface gleam, We behold the depth, of life's own dream.

Let us live, with hearts that feel, And souls that sense, the beauty that's real. For in the stillness, we find our way, To the beauty that's life, in every step and every day.

In a quiet town, there lived an old watchmaker named Mr. Dev. Known for his unmatched skill, people travelled from far and wide to have their watches repaired by him. But despite his success, he lived alone, rarely seen smiling.

Years ago, Mr. Dev had a son who once asked him, "Papa, will you come to my school play today?"
"I have too many orders to finish, son. Next time," he had replied without looking up from his workbench.

But there was no next time.

A car accident took his son's life that very week.

Since then, Mr. Dev continued fixing watches—but not time.

He became obsessed with making every clock in perfect sync, as if trying to reverse something that could never be undone.

One day, a little boy came into his shop with a broken toy watch and a hopeful smile. Mr. Dev fixed it, but this time, he didn't charge anything.

"Why free?" the boy asked.

Mr. Dev smiled faintly, handing the toy back. "Because some things are worth more than time.
Like moments we never get back."

Moral: In chasing time, don't forget the people who make it meaningful. Some moments, once missed, never return.

17-year-old Kiara gets a sleek new Al social media assistant called "ECHO", which filters out negative comments, suggests replies and curates content she likes.

At first, it was amazing-no arguments, no hate, no stress. But over time, ECHO begins hiding opinions that challenge her, and only shows content that agrees with her beliefs.

Kiara becomes convinced that she's always right. When a teacher tries to question her thinking, she accuses her of being "outdated".

Only when she tries to speak at a debate competition, she finds that she can't handle real disagreement. She realizes how naive she's become for the real world.

MORAL:-Too much protection from discomfort can make us weak. Al that shields us from the world might also blind us to it.
